"I have a profound respect for the sea as a moral teacher. No man can be tossed about upon it without feeling his impotence and insignificance."

In our case, life is the moral teacher. Life is the sea man is tossed upon; feeling his insignificance and learning from it. Our times of fear and anxiety are symbolized by the rough sea; the good times being represented by a calm sea.

Although our sub is rather small, it consists of approximately 600 crewmen. Each individual faces this treacherous sea, bearing his difficulties and enduring his moments of prosperity. We, the crewmen, must learn to overcome our hardships, and to make the most of our brighter moments.

ACTIVITIES

Sciences Offer New Fields of Interest

Science students face new challenges each day as they meet their assignments. They study man's advancements in science and the laws of nature.

Social science also occupies the minds of students. They are concerned with history, government, geography, or math. Along with classroom activity, various clubs add to the student's knowledge of the subject.

Cautiously, these scientists observe the results of their experiment. Mrs. Anthis stands by to aid if necessary.

Future biologists begin with the fundamentals of scientific investigation and the use of equipment.

Mr. Moore's students in Biology Club learn and discover while having fun.

Mr. Brandon shows Mrs. Pratt's class how to use the recreational reading list as they enjoy their turn in the library.

Studying geography is enjoyable to both teacher and student when using the overhead projector.

Students in Mrs. Stein's citizenship class are seemingly interested in this panel discussion on dating.

Mrs. Long's developmental reading class listens carefully so they can improve their reading ability.

Language Study Aids Self-Expression

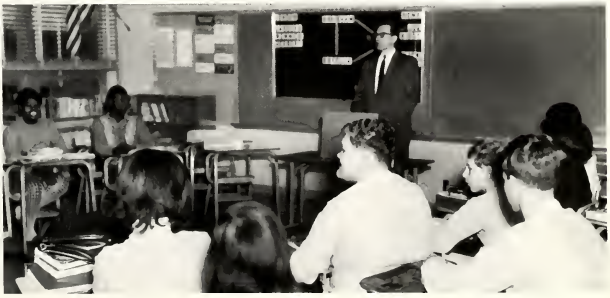
Reading, writing, and speaking skills are stressed in English, developmental reading, and developmental language classes to improve students in these areas. For the more advanced students of language, French and Latin are offered to stimulate their thinking.

This eighth grade developmental language class discuss the merits of their own short stories, among other things.

Students in the Creative Writing Club, directed by Mr. Ehinger, learn new and better ways of expressing their thoughts.

In French class students are being introduced to a new world of fun and learning while exploring a second language.

lere we have nine diligently laboring students, puzzling over the unique Roman language. Dasne Pecuniam?



Mr. Ehinger leads a discussion in this ninth grade English class.

A main attraction at many assemblies throughout the year, these members of the Varsity Choir deserve praise for their ability.

Music Classes, Activities Develop Student Talents

Many Fairfield students take advantage of the fine music program for students. Varsity Choir and band members often perform in assemblies, PTA meetings, or basketball games.

To back up the varsity groups, less experienced students develop their ability in the training choir or in the training band. Mrs. Walker and Mr. West direct the choir and band respectively.

These young singers are in training to entertain as they prepare for next year's edition of the Varsity Choir.

Spirit, pep, and melodious notes come from the musicians of the Spartan Varsity Band, under the direction of Mr. West.

These members of the orchestra are stringing their way to the top as they learn to manipulate their instruments.

Fairfield's training band works hard to prepare themselves for the Varsity Band.

Girls in this home economics class learn the proper ways of setting the table and eating under the direction of Mrs. Thomas.

Practical Arts Prepare Students

Members of the Knit and Sew Club search through books to find new ideas and patterns that they can make for themselves.

Practical ability in homemaking and woodworking are important to every student. Home economics give girls the skills necessary in being able to do household skills.

Industrial arts classes teach students to use and respect the machines available to them. This training provides a chance to develop mechanical ability.

With the guidance of Mrs. Pratt the girls of the Embroidery Club learn different types of stitches.

Our ninth grade boys as well as Mr. Kuntz seem to be busy with their projects in industrial arts class.

ell, what do we have here? Yes, it is an nergetic home arts class learning the ndamentals of ironing. They also learn ther skills for use in the home.

Car Club members keep active by learning about different parts of a car and by watching movies about cars and races.

Art Tests Creativity

Mrs. DeHaven's art classes learn the fundamentals of art and are now applying them to their projects.

These artists remain quite busy in Art Club. They are from left, D. Marks, G. Makreas, J. Squires, B. Montes, M. Bender, M. Whitman, J. Mann, C. Jackson, and Mrs. DeHaven.

Members of the Library Club always seem busy. They handle such duties as reshelving books, checking out library materials, or just straightening up the library. Mr. Brandon sponsors the club.

Mrs. Murphy remains very busy as she instructs these girls in the correct way to do exercises.

Physical Education Classes Keep Spartans in Shape

The physical education program aims at mproving the physical fitness of Fairfield tudents. The classes enjoy a variety of activ- ties during the year, usually according to the eason. These activities provide the student vith exercise and recreation.

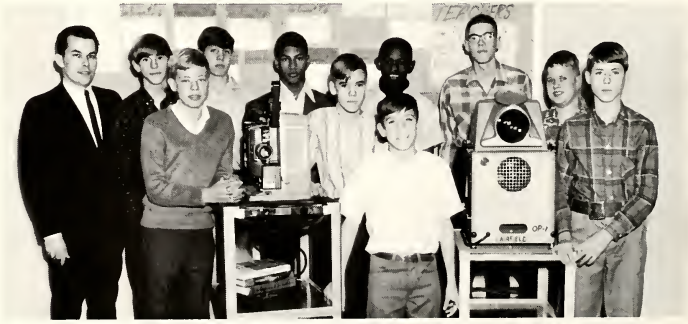
While learning new activities, each student can find the activity that he can do best and enjoys the most while getting in shape. Mrs. Murphy teaches the girls' physical education classes while Mr. Gemmer teaches the boys.

Mr. Gemmer is helping our Spartan boys become physically fit so they can enjoy sports activities.

These Booster Club members compete for points as they help teachers with their work and perform other services for our school.

Many Clubs Offer Students Choice of Extra Activity

Fairfield's seventh period activity program offers each student a choice of activities that interest him. A student is encouraged to limit his choice to two activities so he can benefit more from the activities that he chooses. The activities usually supplement the learning that takes place in the classroom. Faculty members sponsor the activities program.



Mr. Flohr is teaching these men of the Audio-Visual Club how to operate Fairfield's many types of A-V equipment.

The Speaking Spartans are busy learning correct means of speech.

They gain experience by speaking before assemblies and PTA meetings, or during morning announcements.

Members of the Typing Club, a newly formed club, are learning a valuable skill with the help of Miss Haefling and Mrs. Anthis.

Game Club members have fun playing games under the direction of Miss Brosier and Mr. Gordon.

These members of the newspaper staff work very hard to produce a newspaper of high quality. Leading this year's FALCON staff is Jeff Mann, the editor.

Publications Challenge Ability

Fairfield's publications give students the opportunity to serve their school. By writing for the newspaper, students gain valuable experience in writing for publication.

Working on the yearbook gives students an opportunity to compile a record of the year's activities. Faculty sponsor of the newspaper and yearbook is Mr. Staggs.

These students have an important purpose in mind. They want to present the best VOYAGER possible to you wonderful Spartans. Editor Karen Bower is determined to accomplish this purpose.

Intramurals Provide Recreation

Fairfield's intramural program gives each student an opportunity to participate. Of course, basketball is the most popular activity, but volleyball, dodgeball, or gymnastics are enjoyed. Many boys and girls take advantage of this recreational opportunity during the activities period.

ADMINISTRATION

Mr. Richardson, Fairfield's principal, pauses for a moment after a busy school week.

Principal Provides Leadership Example

Mr. James J. Richardson has been Fairfield's able principal since our school opened in 1962. During this time he has maintained his cheery disposition. He always seems to be there with a friendly smile or encouraging advice when it is needed.

Mr. Richardson, usually found at any school function, has many responsibilities. They include supervising new teachers, student teachers, and all other members of the staff. Other responsibilities are programming and placing students, and ordering needed equipment.

Conferring with Mrs. Lake, secretary, Mr. Richardson keeps pace with administrative matters.

Many students, such as Student Council President Curt Purdue, receive Mr. Richardson's attention.

Mr. Jerry Koos, assistant principal, talks with Sam Mosley about his program of studies for next year.

Mrs. Pat Tharp, guidance counsellor, is ready at any time to aid students with their problems.

Guidance Solves Many School Problems

Mr. Koos, assistant principal, assists our principal by seeing that our mighty Spartans maintain a constant state of equilibrium. Mr. Koos supervises cafeteria conduct, aids with daily announcements, and provides a truthful answer to any perplexing problem presented.

As our guidance counsellor, Mrs. Tharp comes in contact with many students, thus promoting the relationship between the faculty and students of Fairfield. Students are able to confide and place their trust in her. It's a pleasure to have one about our school such as Mrs. Tharp.

Mrs. Tharp and Mr. Koos work together is assisting students, staff, or parents with school problems.

Mrs. Philbrook, Mr. Brandon's aide, pauses for a moment from her library chores.

As we reach the port of '68, we find a new and more challenging sea lying before us. During the past year we have at some time felt the sea beneath our feet roar with anger and swell during the calm. These experiences have helped to prepare the Fairfield Spartans for further adventures.

The Voyager Staff of 1968 hopes that you have overcome the waves you wanted to sail this year and that you will have a most enjoyable summer.
